THE MEDICAL COLLEGE

COMPLETELY REORGANIZED

Dean Borden Presents Policy of His Department

By Dean W. C. Borden

The essentials to an efficient medical college are easily given. They are those of any other educational institution, namely, an adequate course, adequately given, with graduation adequately controlled. The details by which these essentials are carried out are by no means easy to apply. The demands of modern medical education are great and unless these demands are properly met, the graduates of such institutions have to meet the criticisms of their fellow practitioners and are unable to meet the requirements of state examining boards. With inadequate preparation for the practice of their profession and they will not only be unable to meet the demands of their chosen vocation in life, but will reflect discredit upon the institution from which they graduated. Every institution is judged by its fruits. Every endeavor, therefore, in an educational institution should be towards providing students with proper facilities for study and then graduate only such students as have fully qualified.

A modern medical school is a very complex organization. Fully equipped laboratories and ample hospital facilities are essential. That the teaching may be definite, the teachers in the different branches must understand definitely what they are to teach, the responsibility of teaching in their subjects must be put upon them and they must determine that the students instructed by them have properly profited by their instruction. In order that the Medical Department of the George Washington University may meet the needs above outlined, the Board of Trustees of the University, on May 6, 1909, approved an ordinance to reorganize and improve the conduct of the Department of Medicine. This ordinance provides that the subjects taught in medi-

Using old style football entirely, with a team that hardly knew the signals being used, and with nothing whatsoever in the way of a variety of plays, George Washington downed a helpless bunch of representatives from one Easton College of Manassas, Va., on American League Park Saturday 23 to 0.

Taking into account the fact that the team had had no scrimmage work and that some of the men had been out but once or twice and that Dougherty used practically all his available material in the game without any attempt to run up a big score, the result was not such a disappointment except to a few who were not informed as to the development of the squad.

The most promising feature of the game was that it showed marked indication that in Kelly of Lafayette we have a quarter that is fully capable of assuming Byrd's place, and in all probability a man whom as a whole will prove a more valuable asset to the team than last year's star. Kelly seems to have everything that goes to make a successful quarter. He is full of ginger and confidence, runs the team fast, and gets into the plays and is a big help to his backs. Outside of Kelly's work, the showing of the rest of the backfield was nothing to enthuse over. Sheridan played a remarkable game considering that he was in a new position. White had the staying powers and

POSITIONS ON STAFF OPEN

Meeting of Candidates—Opportunity for Success

Beginning with its next issue, The Hatchet will inaugurate a competition for positions on its staff. A meeting will be held Monday evening at 7.45 in The Hatchet office, 5th floor, Administration Building. All candidates should report at that time. The meeting will be brief, merely furnishing an outline of the work to perform.

The nature of the work will be reportorial. Each candidate will be required to turn in as much news as he can discover, regardless of other members of the staff. A complete record of the amount of matter "published" by each candidate will be kept, and the positions will be given to those who have supplied the most "copy." The competition will be open to any student in the University, and the appointment will rest on the amount of work done, alone.

In previous years the interest in editorial positions has been inadequate to supply the editors. Last year there were only two candidates eligible for the position of Editor-in-Chief and Business Manager. Each of these positions gives to its holder tuition free and a certain salary, which depends upon the success of the paper. They are elected by The Hatchet Board from the number of candidates eligible. Eligibility rests entirely upon experience and efficiency. And the latter rests on the amount of work published. It can be safely stated that any student who enters in his Freshman year a competition of this sort with the desire to attain either the position of Editor or Business Manager is assured of success, provided he is persistent.

At present the field is open. Freshmen and Sophomores in particular who have any leaning toward a literary life or experience will find the practice invaluable in future years. In addition, the prospects of achieving the highest

RIFLE TEAM'S VICTORY

WINS SHOOT AT SEA GIRT

Third Consecutive Win—Prominent Colleges Compete

Everyone interested in the welfare of athletics at George Washington University will be gratified with the showing made by the Rifle Team at the fourth annual Intercollegiate rifle competition held on the Sea Girt, N. J., rifle range on the 19th of last June.

There the Rifle Team showed for the third consecutive time that it was entitled to the premier position in collegiate outdoor rifle shooting by winning the outdoor championship from a representative field. There were five teams competing in this event, representing the George Washington University, Massachusetts Agricultural College, Columbia University, University of Pennsylvania, and Delaware College.

The match began at 10 a.m. and was hotly contested from the start. The weather was clear and cool, and it was very nearly perfect for a good shooting day, except for a gusty eight-mile wind that blew from the right and rear. In the standing position at 200 yards the wind was a little troublesome, and to those who were not accustomed to shooting in a wind it made the targets sway from side to side, up and down, and even move in irregular curves, at least that's what they said. Here A. R. Calder landed high score for our team with a good 43. At the end of the 200-yard stage the team total was 332, with Columbia leading 1 point.

At the 300-yard stage, where firing was done from a sitting position, the holding was still somewhat uncertain, the highest score for our team being a 43 by W. B. Cash. At the conclusion of this stage George Washington University was first with an aggregate of 471, leading by only 1 point the team from Massachusetts Agricultural College, which had come forward with a rush, pushing Columbia into third place.

At 1.30 p.m. shooting began in the prone position at the next and longest range, 500 yards. Our first four men made excellent scores, but in spite of that it was nip and tuck with the team from Massachusetts, which in its initial in an Intercollegiate competition was making such a strong bid for first honors. When Cash and Capt. Fehr, the last "pair" for George Washington took their position beside the coach on the firing line we were still only 1 point in the lead, but this pair cracked out a 46 and 47, respectively, resulting in a team total of 267, 17 points better than that of the Massachusetts Agricultural College team. The score of 267 out of a possible 300 was exceptional, and was well worth while being proud of, especially in view of the fact that owing to the difficulty of distinguishing the numbers, Calder and Butnam each made bullseye on the wrong target, which bullseyes under the rules had a par value of zero on our score.

The aggregate for George Washington at all three ranges was 738 out of a possible 900, as compared with 725 made in 1908.

The range totals for the teams were as follows:

Yards.....	200	300	500	Total
Geo. Washington Univ.:
A. R. Calder.....	43	40	41	125
C. H. Butman.....	40	36	42	118
H. E. Skinner.....	37	41	45	123
E. F. Wenderoth.....	33	38	46	117
W. B. Cash.....	39	43	46	128
J. R. Fehr (Capt.).....	40	41	47	128
Totals.....	232	239	267	738
Mass. Agr. College.....	224	246	250	720
Columbia University.....	233	232	242	707
Univ. of Pennsylvania.....	222	233	233	688
Delaware College.....	228	221	204	653

The team from Massachusetts Agricultural College protested the match on the ground that Skinner was not an undergraduate, but at a meeting of the Executive Committee of the National Rifle Association in August the protest was not sustained, and as a result the trophy will remain in the President's office for another year.

The victory of the Rifle Team this year and the high score made is commendable when it is considered that an almost entirely new team was put into the field. Capt. Fehr being the only one of last year's team available. It is the general belief that our third victory entitles us to the permanent possession of the trophy, but such is not the case. It appears that it was originally intended to be a perpetual trophy, but it is very likely that some action will soon be taken to limit the competition to a definite term of years, probably the number required to fill all the bronze leaves of the trophy.

Meeting Monday night in The Hatchet Office of candidates for editorial positions on the staff.

FOOTBALL OUTLOOK

The active football season at George Washington had its formal opening Saturday with the Easton College contest. Such a game is simply a stepping stone to the ultimate perfect condition the team will have to be in if the schedule, as it has been arranged, is met with any degree of success. With such a schedule as the one published elsewhere in these columns, it can be readily seen that in the conditioning of the team Dougherty has a big problem. The Varsity must be developed gradually—in order to avoid a slump at the end due to overwork and staleness in general.

Excellent Material

As regards the prospects of the squad itself, judged from the material that is already on hand or expected shortly, under such a schedule as the one arranged last year it would undoubtedly be a winner. The management selected Benjamin Dougherty to pilot the team for the coming season. As a coach Dougherty may not have had any great amount of experience. As a player he certainly has shown the earmarks of a successful coach. Successful in his football work at Andover, Harvard, and New York University, and having clearly established a reputation for the essentials necessary to make a good coach, Dougherty has the implicit confidence and support of the entire squad and, in fact, of every one who is acquainted with his success as a player. Assisting the coach, Alston, the captain, showed the past season that he is in every way competent to pilot this year's eleven.

Of the old men who have won their "W's" in seasons past, Hart, Sheridan, White, Captain Alston, Eickoff, Ellis and Brooks are already on hand—all slightly heavier than last year and all pretty sure of ultimate positions. Alston has been shifted from guard to tackle, and with Hart will probably fill the tackle positions in the important games. White, one of the stars of the 1907 backs has joined the squad and will give anyone in the backfield a hot fight for their position. Sheridan is on hand and for the present at least is working at full. Whether he will remain in that position or whether he will be shifted back to the line remains to be seen. Eickoff, center on last year's Varsity, has been working at one of the guard positions and has a line position cinched. Brooks, the old reliable, has been playing one of the ends.

These men and Bullough, Crouch and Holmes, all fast heavy men give the assurance that the line this year will be heavier and faster than last year's line, even though the loss of such men as Summers, Jacobson, and Metzger

Y.M.C.A. NOTES

On Saturday, October 9, at 12:30 o'clock p.m., a reception to students, both Freshmen and Upperclassmen, from out of town will be held in the Central Y. M. C. A. Building, 1736 G street northwest. At 12:30 o'clock a substantial buffet luncheon will be served, followed by an inspection of the building and an enjoyment of all privileges therein. Any male student residing in Washington for the college year only and desiring an invitation to the reception should leave his name and address at the University Y. M. C. A. Room, 4th floor of the Administration Building.

It is understood that Hadleigh Marsh, one of the founders of our Association, will be back at George Washington from Chicago University this year.

Please fill out the loose slip inserted in your Handbook and either drop it in The Hatchet box or bring it to the Y.M.C.A. Room immediately.

All men are earnestly requested to attend the Y.M.C.A. Chapel service each Wednesday at noon and help us to make them helpful and attractive.

Anyone desiring a Handbook should hasten to the fourth floor and obtain a copy before the limited supply is exhausted.

Room Changes Hands

The old "Union" room on the 4th floor of the Administration Building has been turned over to the Y.M.C.A. for its use. The change seems decidedly for the better. The Y.M.C.A. management will allow smoking as heretofore, and will throw the room open to any student in the University, regardless of affiliation with the Y.M.C.A. The room is furnished in splendid style, with desks, easy chairs, tables, etc. A cordial invitation is extended to all George Washington men to mount the four flights with the promise that the reward will be worth the effort.

Error in Handbook

In the Y.M.C.A. Handbook which is being distributed among the students there is an error which the editors desire to have corrected. Under athletics, the name of Mr. E. Eaton appears as manager of the Track Team. No manager has been elected as yet, Mr. R. L. Newhouser, manager of last year's team, holding over until the Athletic Council takes the matter up.

At the last meeting of the Council the matter was laid on the table, but will probably receive consideration in the near future. What action will be taken it is impossible to state.

University "Bulletin"

A recent number of the "Bulletin" of the University contains a symposium on "The Value of Humanistic, Particularly Classical Studies as a Training for Men of Affairs," a series of papers from the proceedings of the Classical Conference, held at Ann Arbor, Mich., April 3, 1909. This "Bulletin" is of especial interest to George Washington University students because it contains papers from Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, and Professor James Brown Scott of our Faculty and from Hon. John W. Foster, formerly lecturer in the College of the Political Sciences. All three of these gentlemen are earnest advocates of the importance of the study of the classics, particularly Latin, as a preparation for men of affairs in all departments of public life.

will be appreciated. The big problem will be the development of a fast backfield, able to consistently gain on a well organized defensive team such as the Varsity will meet in all their important games. Crafts, the star of last year's backfield has been out, and has signified his intention of joining the team the last of October. Crafts was injured several times last year and no chances will be taken with having him crippled and out of the big games the present season. Ellis is already working and has his old job apparently cinched. "Speed" Kelly, one of the stars of the Lafayette eleven last year has been working at quarter and at the present time has the call on the job. Stocky and a shifty man in open field, he looks as if the pilot position will be well taken care of. Little can be said of the other new men at the present time, the season not being far enough advanced to get a good line on their work. A tabulated record of the weights and personnel of the squad is given in other space.

George Washington Football Squad

Varsity Men on Squad—Hart, 200, Tackle; Sheridan, 185, Fullback; White, 155, Half; Alston, 190, (Captain), Tackle; Eickoff, 186, Center; Ellis, 168, Half; Brooks, 165, End.

Crafts, 165, Half, and Thrall, 168, Fullback, of 1908 Varsity are expected to join the squad shortly. 1908 Reserve Men on Squad—

O'Neal, 154, Tackle; Brandt, 165, Center; Porter, 150, Half; Curran, 170, Guard; Holmes, 185, Guard.

New Material on Squad—Kelly, 163, Quarterback; Tulloss, 150, Half; Will, 180, Guard; Robinette, 164, Half; Bullough, 190, Guard; Johnson, 150, Half; Crouch, 180, Tackle; Parker, 161, End; Frazier, 150, End; Farmer, 170, End.

Of the new material, Kelly has had experience on last year's strong Lafayette eleven, and Farmer was on the reserve eleven at Michigan. Robinette, Bullough, and Johnson are Eastern High School recruits.

Average weight of squad, 175.

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 6, 1909

With this issue ends the free copies of The Hatchet. We have distributed these free issues in order that the student may know there is a college paper and may form an idea of its appearance. Should you fail to receive a copy of this issue either drop a postal to the editor or visit us in our spacious office on the 5th floor, Administration Building, and ask for one.

We want you to subscribe. It is impossible to run a paper upon the returns from advertisements alone. If you believe in college institutions of this character, you must do your share in its support. The subscription price is far below that of other colleges. The arrangements for payment are surely as lenient as could possibly be expected. Let us have your subscription at once, so that you may receive the complete series and thereby possess a record—in fact, the only record, of the year at George Washington.

Printed in this issue is a subscription blank. Send it to us now, or see one of The Hatchet agents, whose names are published in another section of the paper.

If you believe in the theory of college publications it is your duty to make them practicable.

The Literary Department

Because of the absence of any literary publication, George Washington has always lacked the means whereby to give its students an opportunity for presenting their contributions in the nature of literature.

The Hatchet is primarily a news agent, yet its position as the only college paper gives it a just plea to partake of the nature of a literary magazine. Necessarily, this can be accomplished only in a small way, but we shall make the attempt, with the hope that our success will be sufficient to justify our temerity.

Every week we shall devote two columns to "the lighter mood." We have placed this department in the hands of Miss Myrle Cameron, whose ability has been demonstrated on numerous occasions, both in her school papers and in the "Cherry Tree," the George Washington Annual. We make no claim that all matter published will be original with the students of this University; we trust it shall, but when the muse nods we shall, unblushingly, appropriate what meets our needs from the sources at hand.

There are many members of this University whose ability in the literary field is sufficient to merit publication. To all such we extend a cordial invitation. Poems, stories, skits, all will be received and published when worthy. Articles dropped in The Hatchet box or mailed to the editor will reach us.

We believe that this department can be made a brilliant feature of this paper if the University students will do their share by contributing the articles. Should enough interest be shown, it is probable that prizes will be offered for the best poems and the best stories.

The first handbook of the Y.M.C.A. has been issued, and is indeed worthy of mention. To Messrs. James Berry and David Covell, and their assistants, all praise is due not only for their success, but for the time and energy and personal sacrifices spent in preparation of the book. It is complete in every detail; for the new student in particular its value is beyond question. Practically every question that would arise as regards the University or its numerous activities is answered in the little pamphlet, which is of just such a size as to fit the pocket.

It is to be hoped that the efforts of these men will bear their just reward, and that the Y.M.C.A. will count as its banner year the season of 1909-1910.

The address of President Needham at the opening exercises set at rest the idle rumors current this summer as to the University's financial condition. The closing sentence of the President's remarks stands out as an axiom in the history of our University: "Men may come and men may go, but this institution has in it the fire of eternal life and will live throughout the years." No less impressive was Justice Harlan's conclusion, "You have heard very encouraging words about the future of the University—words from men whose opinions are entitled to weight."

The life of an institution that fills such a place as George Washington University is assured. It supplies a want and will continue as long as that want. Washington demands an institution to educate its youth; that demand will increase with the years; and so will this University increase and spread out just as long as it supplies that demand as nobly as it has done in the past.

position on the paper is so easily within their grasp as to make it well worthy of the effort.

It is probable that in March four editors will be selected from among the candidates. A position on the staff will give to its recipient a certain proportion of the profits of the paper, depending entirely on its success. But the final reward, the Editorship or office of Business Manager brings with it sufficient pecuniary inducement to merit the effort put into it.

Opening Exercises

Formal exercises to celebrate the opening of the University's eighty-ninth year were held in University Hall last Wednesday. The seats and aisles were filled with students, alumni, and friends of the University, who seized the opportunity on more than one occasion to applaud vigorously the remarks of the speakers.

The opening address was made by President Needham, who briefly outlined the work of the coming year in the various departments. He put at rest all rumors regarding the suspension of any branch of the University, and gave assurance that the work would go on as usual. He commented on the work of the institution from the standpoint of Washington City, showing just how necessary it was that the University should flourish.

The principal address of the occasion was that delivered by Commissioner Macfarland.

The ceremonies were closed with a few words of good advice from Justice Harlan, who had shortened his vacation, he said, to be present and put a quietus on the rumors of his illness. He emphasized the point that students at George Washington who would succeed must work. "If you are not willing to work," he said, "you have no business here. Go home and get a job on a street car."

Columbian Literary Society

The Columbian Literary Society held its first meeting for the year Friday evening. A good crowd was in attendance and 26 new men signified their intention of becoming members of the society.

President Cohn in his welcome to the first-year men showed the prime importance to students beginning the study of law of joining a debating society. Addresses were given by Dean McBain of the College of Political Science, by Dean Vance of the Law College and by Prof. Earnest.

Dean Vance, in a forceful address, said that he could not too strongly urge the men of the Law School to become members of one or more of the debating societies. "If there is any profession," he said, "where a man must be able to think fast and to express himself clearly and to the point, it is in the profession of the law. And in the matter of training along this line of work, do not keep putting it off and saying to yourselves that in some golden future you will attend to this side of your education."

Practical Education Department

Q Any fool can go to college, but it takes a wise man to get a college education.

Q You can take a four years' course in lunch and fresh air with comparatively little effort, and incidentally acquire a considerable amount of "literary atmosphere." But you won't get your money's worth.

Q It is unfortunate but true that in this day and generation a college or professional school graduate is expected to know something. The time has gone by when a few letters attached to a man's name were a sign of superlative wisdom. Degrees are too cheap nowadays.

Q If you only want a degree, you wouldn't come to George Washington. There are several places in town where you can buy more letters of the alphabet for a good deal less money. And you could save time as well.

Q Isn't it a logical deduction, therefore, that you want to carry some of your college education away with you?

Q Now there are several ways of doing this. There are some persons gifted with such wonderful memories that they can listen to a lecture without taking a note and yet afterwards be able to reproduce it almost verbatim. These people are rare and most of them die young.

Q Then there are others who take copious notes in longhand. The only trouble with this method is that it takes an exceptional student to read the aforesaid notes after they are "cold."

Q Other students use shorthand. They can get just as much as they want of the lecture and can keep it permanently. You have doubtless observed that these students are very popular just before examinations.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing semester: President, Mr. Rogers; Vice President, Mr. C. B. Smith; Secretary, Mr. Root, and Treasurer, Mr. Faulkner. The executive committee is composed of Messrs. Cox and Ford.

The newly elected President after a complimentary speech, presented the outgoing President with a gavel that he had used during his term of office.

New Courses Offered

A special two hours' course in Law Latin will be given during this year by Arthur Schoenfeld, A.M. A course in preparation for the study of Roman Law will be arranged for a sufficient number of students. Those interested will see Mr. Schoenfeld in the lobby of the Law Building, at 4.40 p.m., on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday.

Q Wouldn't it be worth something to you to have a verbatim report of the lectures of some of your professors? There will be times when you will be willing to pay almost any price for some one else's notes on a stiff subject. Why not have your own notes instead?

Q It takes time and practice, of course, to become an expert stenographer. But it is possible to learn to take notes in a much shorter period. That can be accomplished in your spare time between classes at the University.

Q Draughon's Practical Business College, 1317 New York Avenue, has arranged a special course for George Washington students. Pupils can begin at any time. Instruction is individual, and if a lesson is missed work can be begun at exactly the point where it was left off. Moreover, under a co-operative plan it is possible for a student to earn back every cent he pays for tuition.

NOTE.—Realizing the limitations on the college student's time and pocket book, Draughon's Practical Business College has arranged a special course for young men and women from George Washington. It is now possible for a student to secure a practical business training without interfering in the least with his University classes. Moreover, the entire course need not cost him a penny.

played a creditable game, as did Porter while he lasted. Hooten had had no work at half and couldn't be expected to shine in the position. The biggest fault in the backfield play was that they didn't work together. They ran high and in every play some one was slow. All this, of course, can be remedied with work, and the backfield is bound to improve with the work they will surely get.

The line looks to be stronger than that of last year. It is to be slightly heavier, and with the added experience of the varsity men should prove the formidable feature of the eleven. Hart and Alston looked better than the rest of the linemen on Saturday's showing, as they were repeatedly used for most of George Washington's good offensive work. Eickhoff also played a hard, consistent game. Holmes surprised many by his play Saturday and gives promise of making a good, steady man in a guard position. Brooks played a good game at end and got down fast on punts. Farmer looked a little inexperienced, but gives promise of developing into a good end. He is heavy and at the same time moves with a good deal of rapidity, and with a little more accurate work in tackling will probably make good. Altogether it is perfectly apparent that Dougherty has some good material to work with, but it needs good hard work to develop it into a machine that will work consistently together.

As far as the work of the visitors was concerned, they presented about the weakest aggregation that George Washington has lined up against in some time. Their tackling was very crude, most of it resembling the villain's attempt to choke the heroine in a 10-20-30. They had some weight, but it was of the undeveloped kind, and their work was amazingly slow, so slow in fact that the referee had to plead with them to keep moving.

Capt. Sparrow of Easton started the game with a drive to Kelly which the quarterback returned about 12 yards. White made 15 around the ends on a long, wide run in which he had absolutely no interference. Smashes at the weak Easton line and off tackle plays brought the ball to midfield, where Eastern stiffened and held. Sheridan punted out of bounds on Easton's 30-yard line. Brooks threw Sparrow for a loss, Farmer stopped them on his side and Easton punted on the third down to Sheridan, who fumbled but recovered, and brought the ball back to the middle of the field. White made 45 around the left side and Porter beat it around the other extremity for some more, and then went over on the next play for a touchdown. Sheridan helped with one squarely between the posts. G. W. U., 6; Easton, 0.

That was about all the first half. In the second half Kelly cut the end runs which Easton had managed to solve and worked his tackles for good gains on plays off the opposing tackle.

cine should be divided into eleven groups or divisions, each division with a definite head and with definite territory to cover in teaching. This separating the Faculty into divisions is to insure not only complete covering of the field of medicine, but to place definite responsibility upon each group of teachers so that it may be determined whether each subject is adequately taught. This prevents division of responsibility in teaching and allows the correction of errors in that the Faculty will be able to determine where inadequate teaching is done, if such is the case.

In the last two years of a medical course clinical teaching is of the greatest importance, and control of clinical material is essential to efficient instruction. In the leading schools of the United States clinical material is abundant and properly controlled. The Medical Department of our University has two divisions; one of which, the Hospital, is subordinate to the School. The Hospital was established for the sole purpose of providing clinical material for the clinical teaching in the school. That this may be properly done, the material must be controlled by the clinical teachers. To this end, the new ordinances provide that the chief of each clinical division shall be chief of his service in the Hospital. This gives authoritative supervision of the service by each chief who is engaged in clinical teaching in the school and it becomes his duty to see that the clinical material which is of interest in his service is properly used for instruction of the students. In this way the clinical part of the Medical Department can be brought properly in relation with the teaching part. In this connection it is necessary not only that the chief of each service maintain supervision of that service, but that his associates give their fullest attention to the development of that service.

Briefly, the above outlines the plan for conducting the Medical Department of our University in the future. It is hoped that the provision of the ordinances are sufficiently definite to make the action of the Department practically automatic, leaving little if any opportunity for errors in the working of the system.

A further matter which is now under consideration is the advisability for putting the Faculty in touch with the student body, so that circumstances coming to the knowledge of either may be brought before the other for due consideration and proper action. To effect this, I propose to submit to the different classes in the Medical School a proposition looking to the forming of what may be called a Consultation Committee, this committee to consist of the President of each class and the Dean, the committee to meet for conference relative to school matters. It is thought that this will give the Dean as the representative of the Faculty prompt information of any general and special matters which may come to the attention of the student body and enable him to put the Faculty in adequate touch with that body. Unity of effort is absolutely essential to success in every undertaking. In an educational institution co-ordination of effort and mutual understanding existing between teachers and students is bound to be to the advantage of all. The students and professors of any institution desire to be known as belonging to a reputable school having a high standing. All should work together to produce this result which is equally valuable to the institution, its teachers, its students and its graduates.

The Medical Department of our University already bears an excellent reputation, but this is an age of advancement, and to maintain position, educational institutions like all other enterprises, must bend every effort toward reaching and maintaining the highest possible standard.

Gossip of the Football World

The suggestion that George Washington and V.P.I. change the date of their contest this year in order to avoid a conflict with the Georgetown-Virginia game, made by the Sporting Editor of a local paper, meets with favorable comment around the University and among a great majority of Hatchetite supporters. The Virginia game is an annual feature of Georgetown's schedule; has always been played upon this date, and is attended not only by Georgetown supporters, but by all who enjoy a good football contest. If the management cares to cater at all to the patronage of Washington people, as well as George Washington alumnae, it would be well to move this game one day forward if possible.

* * *

Among the eastern elevens, Harvard bids fair on early season form to again defeat Yale in the annual contest. Pennsylvania looks weaker than heretofore, and both the Michigan and Cornell games will probably be closer this year. Prospects at Princeton are not overly bright. In the west, Wisconsin will have a veteran eleven. Michigan has again busted into western football, scheduling a game with Minnesota despite their ostracism by Stagg, the ruling power in western football. More intersectional contests than heretofore will be scheduled. With the Michigan-Pennsylvania and Cornell games, Syracuse will play Michigan and also Notre Dame.

* * *

Pennsy and Yale had considerable trouble with Ursinus and Wesleyan. Yale's work was marred by repeated fumbling.

* * *

George Washington football stock took a big boom the past week when it was learned that E. L. Lathrop of Depauw University, All-Western half in '06, and a former running mate of Douglas, the star Michigan half, might enter the University. If so, he will in all probability join the squad. Lathrop is eligible for one more year of athletics, and as he weighs 180 pounds in football togs would be a big addition to the backfield.

Sale Progresses

The sale of athletic tickets is gratifying to the management. A large number of students took to heart the suggestion to see the Treasurer at once, rather than wait until a ticket was sent, and as a result a considerable number were sold through that office.

During the next week an effort will be made to see that each student is reached, but in the meantime the Treasurer will be glad to accommodate, at any time, a request for a ticket.

Attention is called to the fact that an error has been made in the letters sent with the tickets. As announced, partial payments of $1.00 will be accepted, but instead of thirty days allowance for the additional cost, all tickets must be paid in full by November 3. In other words, students will be given approximately a month from today in which to make complete returns.

In addition to the other advantages of an Association ticket, its holder is entitled to vote for Assistant Managers and officers of the Athletic Association. Only holders of Association tickets are allowed that privilege. As an election will take place within the next month, it is desirable that students intending to purchase tickets do so at once, in order that their names may be placed on record.

The Behman show opened Monday at the Gayety. Standing out among an array of talent that is seldom surpassed in burlesque is seen the ever attractive Mollie Williams.

Anniversary Celebration

October 7, 1909, marks the date on which Lambda Chapter is to celebrate her tenth anniversary in Phi Sigma Kappa. The banquet will be held at Rauscher's, and on that momentous occasion Washington will witness one of the largest gatherings ever known in Greek letter circles. Not only those residing in the city, but also many representatives of other Chapters throughout the states will attend. Enthusiasm is marked and success assured.
